

Unit 7 - Anger Management

Personal and Transferable Skills

Anger Management

A sudden, keen displeasure aroused by real or assumed injury or injustice and is usually accompanied by the desire to punish.

A normal human emotion but problems arise when people allow anger to control them rather than controlling it.

Two categories of anger:

- Appropriate

- Inappropriate

Appropriate Anger

THREE CRITERIA:

- A REAL THREAT MUST EXIST -
HAS TO BE A LOGICAL REASON FOR EXPERIENCING THE ANGER.

- THE ANGER LEVEL MUST BE
PROPORTIONAL TO THE LEVEL OF THE THREAT.

- THE ACTION TAKEN SHOULD REDUCE THE THREAT WITHOUT CAUSING HARM TO YOURSELF
OR OTHERS. WILD, HARMFUL
ACTIONS ARE CONSIDERED
INAPPROPRIATE.

A row of five yellow pawns, resembling chess pieces, standing on a dark wooden surface. The pawns are arranged in a slightly staggered line, and their reflection is visible on the polished wood. The background is a soft, out-of-focus grey.

Inappropriate Anger

- Cause damage to all involved and must be avoided.

Controlling Anger

A person's response to anger can be changed by controlling the effects of anger.

Learn how to express anger in order to control it.

Actions that can take place but should be avoided at all cost:

- - Evasion
- - Containment
- - Displacement
- - Indirect expression

Suggestions for Controlling Anger

Regular exercise

Do you have control over the situation?

Everyday frustrations

Communication

Humour

Alternatives – identify your triggers

Counselling

Activities

Role-playing scenarios to practice anger management techniques

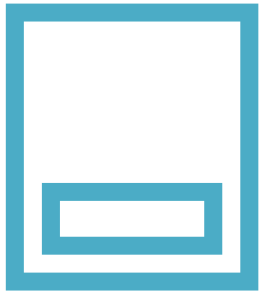

Group discussions on personal experiences with anger and how to manage it

Creating a personal anger management plan

Video Reference

Link to a relevant anger management
video (e.g., YouTube)

References

Eduvos textbook references

Additional resources